

We are extremely excited to announce the destination for our 2012 incentive trip will once again be Puerto Rico, April 12 - 16, 2012.

Over the past five centuries the converging cultures of the Caribbean Indians, Spain, Africa and North America have blended to create a uniquely Puerto Rican heritage evident in its food, music, language, architecture, religion, lifestyles and arts and crafts.

Puerto Rico was once described by a national travel guide as “Paradise’s baby wrapped in an urban comforter, with a U.S. uncle and a Spanish mother. Puerto Rico is truly a melting pot of cultures.

While in Puerto Rico we will be staying four nights at the El Conquistador Resort. There have been some changes at the El Conquistador since we last visited in 2004. The major one being that she is now a part of The Waldorf Astoria Collection and has undergone a $120 million renovation. The El Conquistador has also added a sea-side Coqui Water Park with water slides, lazy river and infinity pool and new restaurants.

Some things that haven’t changed are the friendliness of the staff and their desire to make your stay memorable.

We hope you will plan to join us as we revisit Puerto Rico and the El Conquistador. Be sure to mark your calendars for April 12 - 16, 2012 and look for more updates on both Puerto Rico and the El Conquistador in future mailings.
