

NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, “The Big Easy”, is beautiful and beguiling, eccentric, exciting and enchanting. She is full of history, 4-star restaurants, antique shops and you can even take cooking classes for those special dishes indigenous to New Orleans. In New Orleans, you will find the oldest operating street car in America.

The best way to get the true history and flavor of the real New Orleans is by taking a walking tour or carriage ride through the streets of the historic Vieux Carre (French Quarter) and the Garden District.

Visit secluded courtyards, haunted mansions and above-the-ground cemeteries known as the “cities of the dead”. Around mid-morning listen for the sounds of a steam calliope calling you for a Mississippi Steamboat Natchez cruise. Scour the French Market for trinkets and treasures. Indulge in a cloud of powdered sugar with beignets. Visit the tomb of the famous Voodoo Queen, Marie Laveau, in the Old St. Louis Number One cemetery.

The atmosphere around Jackson Square is colorful and entertaining as dozens of artists, street performers, fortune tellers and professed psychics compete for attention and your dollar.

Yes, New Orleans is truly a unique city and that why she will host our first Breast Cancer Babes Survivor Celebration May 18 - 20, 2012.

I hope you will plan to attend as we celebrate our victory over cancer and spread the word to all you know that want to join in the celebration.
